Minors in Slavic Languages & Literatures

The Department of Slavic Languages & Literatures offers three minors: Russian Language, Slavic Languages, and Russian and Slavic Literatures. These minors enrich students’ education by enhancing their understanding of how people in Russia, Central and Eastern Europe, and the former Soviet Union experience the world, and serve as an excellent complement for those studying in various fields, including business, political science, psychology, and international studies.

Students who complete a minor in our department study with nationally acclaimed faculty, and benefit from the department's close ties to the Ellison Center for Russian, East European and Central Asian Studies, in the Jackson School of International Studies, as well as local Slavic communities. They also have the opportunity to take what they learn outside the classroom, by participating in study abroad, practicing their language skills at a Conversation Table, or attending one of our many departmental events.

Declaring a Minor

Students in good academic standing may declare one of our minors at any time by meeting with their major adviser. Please see Undergraduate Advising's Minor page for additional considerations about earning a minor.
